Editorial change: Continuous publication

The Brazilian Journal of Veterinary Pathology was established in 2008 and initially adopted a biannual publication schedule. In 2011, this frequency was increased to a quarterly publication. As of Volume 18, the journal has transitioned to a continuous publication model. This change enhances the publication process for accepted articles, ensuring that research findings are disseminated more promptly and efficiently to our readership. The BJVP Editorial Board is committed to facilitating the swift exchange of knowledge in the field of veterinary pathology, and this new format will significantly benefit our authors and readers alike.
